

Six Dead In Little Rock Explosion

Workers Trapped In Flames Caused By Gas Explosion

Frame Boarding House Burns Like Paper Following Blast.

MANY ARE DOOMED

Dead and Injured Mostly Employees In Railroad Shops.

LITTLE ROCK, Aug. 19.—(AP)—An explosion of a defective gas stove early this morning started a fire which cost the lives of six persons and serious burns and injuries to several others. Five of the dead were trapped in upstairs rooms while asleep.

The blast occurred at four o'clock this morning at Mrs. E. L. Darragh, operator of the house, was preparing breakfast. She was badly burned about the face and hands. Her screams aroused several of the roomers upstairs who escaped through windows. Four men were downstairs awaiting breakfast and easily escaped. Others who were not awakened by the blast nor the woman's screams were trapped in their rooms, cut off from every avenue of escape.

The dead are: Sam Archer, 17; Hiram Evans, 30; Hank Harris, 60; Martin Kipt, Dan Stranger and Fred Matthews. Of the injured, one was in a serious condition.

Mrs. Darragh said she had had trouble with the stove two or three times before but had no indication of trouble when the explosion occurred this morning.

The house was a 14-room frame structure, old, and burned like paper. Most of the roomers were railroad workers employed in the local Missouri Pacific shops.

One man who slept upstairs said he was awakened by Mrs. Darragh's screams and started down stairs only to find the stairway blocked with flames. He returned to his room and escaped by leaping from a window. Another roomer upstairs sustained severe injuries when he leaped from a window.

Judge Earning Reputation As "Marryin' Justice"

Judge Bright, local justice of the peace, is earning himself something of a reputation as a marryin' justice and if the run of business keeps up he'll have a record to equal that of any Texarkana officer who is reaping a harvest because of Texas' new marriage law.

Saturday night at 8:30 the judge was called to his office where he performed the ceremony of Charlie Adair and Miss Pinkie London, both of Padmos. Sunday evening at five he again read a ceremony, this time for Odiss Sims and Miss Mabel Easterling.

Prominent El Dorado Man In Local Hospital

Harold E. Ward, principal of Junior H School in El Dorado, is resting easily in a local hospital after an operation for appendicitis performed Saturday.

Mr. Ward will be pleasantly remembered by many Hope people. His wife was Miss Mary Cannon, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. G. E. Cannon, and she is at her husband's bedside.

Swedish Fliers On Way Over Atlantic

Reach New York Tuesday If Flight Is Successful Is Belief.

LISBON, Portugal, Aug. 19.—(AP)—Two youthful Swedish aviators, Oskar Kassar and Kurt Laessle, took off at 10 a. m. today, 130 a. m., E. S. T., for a westward crossing of the Atlantic to New York.

They considered it improbable they would reach New York without refueling and expected to land, probably at Halifax, to take on more petrol, then continuing their flight.

The plane has a cruising speed of 100 miles per hour and the pilots believe, if the flight is successful, they will reach the American metropolis Tuesday afternoon.

Couple Wanted Here Arrested In Grand Rapids

Trailed Through Four States, Picked Up By Michigan Officers.

FEDERAL CHARGES

No Funds To Guarantee Expense of Returning Couple.

Officers here were advised Sunday afternoon of the arrest in Grand Rapids, Mich., of R. B. Carney and Miss Inez Erwin, both of this place, for whom officers had been seeking since July 1.

Carney, formerly in the employ of the Missouri Pacific here as yard clerk, had been transferred by the company to Doniphan, Mo. There, it is alleged, he bought a new car on the deferred payment plan, the paper being handled by the Universal Credit Co., of St. Louis. Then he abandoned his wife and two children, drove here and in company with the Erwin girl, left the country.

Jim Bearden, former sheriff, was retained by the credit company to repossess the car and arrest Carney. The trail led through four states, culminating yesterday when the couple were picked up on their arrival in Grand Rapids, identification effected by means of photographs Bearden had forwarded.

Mr. Bearden today communicated with the Department of Justice at Oklahoma City who took over the matter, announcing Carney would be prosecuted under the white slave act and transporting stolen auto as well. The place of trial has not been announced by the department, but it will either be in the Michigan city or in Texarkana.

Honors for Producing Species Claimed Here

Hope not only lays claim to produce the world's largest melons, not to mention twins and triplets of the growth, but now this community steps out into the limelight with a peculiar species of fowl, half guinea and half chicken.

L. T. Hicks, Route 1, is the possessor of the hybrid. It was one of a setting of allegedly guinea eggs placed under a hen to hatch—and did. Now, every one knows anything knows it takes guinea eggs four weeks to hatch, while hen eggs hatch in a week less time. This particular egg hatched in three weeks, the hatch plainly being half. Sometimes its noise is that of a guinea, sometimes a chicken. Its appearance is that of a chicken, its actions, quick, nervous and jerky, that of a guinea, and it bears as well the head-marks of a guinea.

That's the story as Mr. Hicks told it to Star—and he has the fowl to prove it!

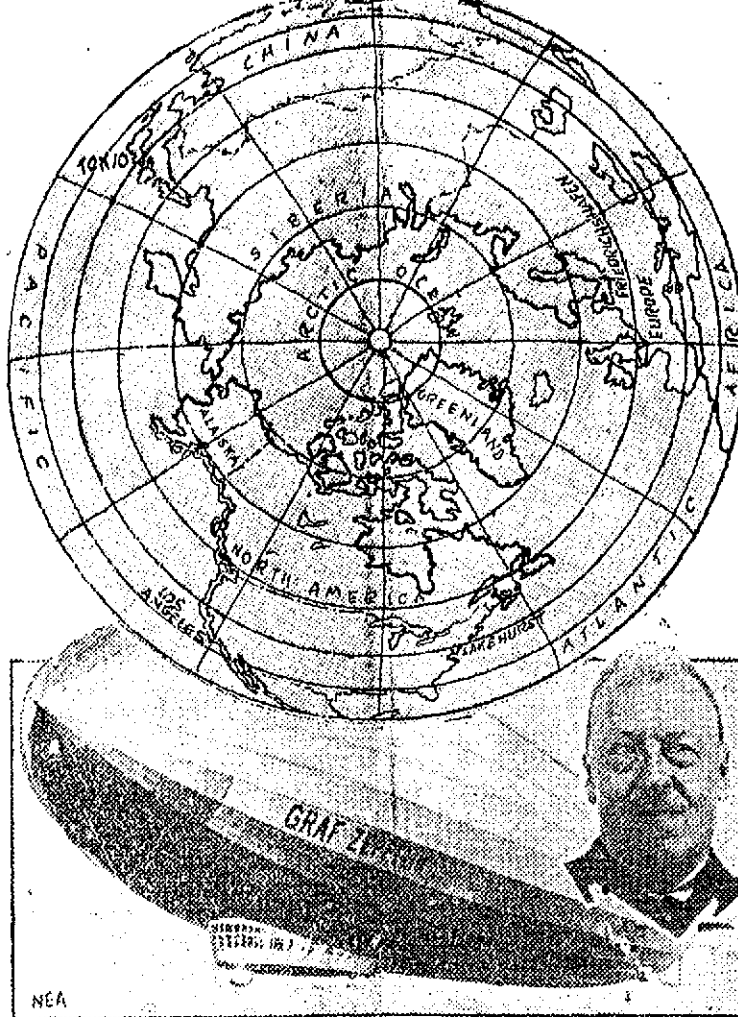

Kansas's Serum Aids Malta Fever Victims

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 19.—A serum to treat Malta fever, a disease recently prevalent in several midwestern and eastern states has been developed by Dr. Fred E. Angle of the University of Kansas medical school.

His bacterial vaccine, made from cultures of brucella abortus, the germ believed to cause the affliction, is being studied by Dr. H. E. Hasseltine of the United States public health service in Washington.

While his serum does not always cure patients, Dr. Angle points out that in numerous instances it has brought decidedly beneficial results.

Landing today at Tokyo the silver queen of the air is being made ready to take off Tuesday on the hop across the Pacific to Los Angeles. The Tokyo landing was made early this morning.

Muldrow Negro Dies From Wounds

Bullet Wounds Inflicted By Ike Hamilton Thursday Prove Fatal.

O. D. Muldrow, well known local negro who was shot last Thursday by Ike Hamilton in an altercation following a drinking party, succumbed to his wounds last night, dying about eight o'clock.

Hamilton, who was arrested shortly after the shooting occurred, is held in jail pending preliminary hearing. A first degree murder charge will be filed against him, officers say.

North Carolina Strikers In Riot

Clash Occurs When Non-Union Men Start To Work.

MARION, N. C., Aug. 19.—(AP)—One man was severely beaten and several seriously injured as 1600 strikers at the Clinchfield Cotton Mills here early today sought to prevent 400 non-union workers from working the mills. The disorder was precipitated by pickets attempting to prevent non-union men from returning to work. The mills have been idle for several weeks.

Superintendent Henry, of the mill, was severely beaten and bruised by blackjacks and clubs wielded by strikers and their sympathizers on the picket lines.

The strike has been on for six weeks. At first a few men returned to work. Two weeks ago the plant closed. Officials had announced the mill would re-open today and non-union men had been imported to take the place of the strikers. The rioting followed.

Two companies of North Carolina National Guard went on duty in the strike area shortly before noon today. They were picked here by Asheville and Morgantown by auto.

Rephan Leaves for Trip Through Eastern Markets

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. I. Rephan and two children left this morning for New York and Boston and other points in the East expecting to be away about a month.

During their stay on the east coast Mr. Rephan will put in the time buying merchandise for his store of business places in this state while Mrs. Rephan and the youngsters will visit friends and relatives at various points.

Salesman Falls Dead In Texarkana Hotel

TEXARKANA, Aug. 19. (AP)—T. K. Tandy, a salesman out of Tupelo, Miss., fell unconscious in the lobby of a hotel here today and died in a few minutes. His death was attributed to heart disease.

3 From Hope To Join Excursion

Local Travelers To Board Train At Gurdon Wednesday.

Three Hope residents will join the Camden Industrial Tour as it passes through Gurdon on the Missouri Pacific Wednesday afternoon, headed for the Northern states and Canada.

They are Mr. and Mrs. Joe Greene, and R. R. Cornelius.

Luther Ellison, secretary of the South Arkansas Chamber of Commerce, at Camden, has been making strenuous efforts to swell the size of the excursion party as the date of departure approaches. Close to 100 reservations have been reported, and a number of last-minute calls are expected.

The price of the 10-day excursion, including meals and tips, is $120; and reservations may be by telephoning or telegraphing Mr. Ellison at Camden.

Rhodes Brothers Install Brake Testing Device

A new device, which tells whether or not all four brakes have equal braking power, has been installed by Rhodes Bros. service station on Division street. This brake tester makes it possible to adjust each of the four brakes on an automobile so that they all work in unison.

"Most auto accidents," says Thurman Rhodes, proprietor, "are caused by faulty brakes, in the opinion of experts. Many sets of brakes are inefficient after the car is six months old, only because adjustments have been loosened, or because brake bands are worn. Then, when brakes are needed, they are not in a position to do the work that was intended of them; that of stopping the car."

It is understood that this machine is one of a dozen or so in all Arkansas. No other town in this section of the state has one, so far as has been learned.

Senate In Session But Three Minutes

Will Take Three-Day Recesses Until Tariff Bill Is Completed.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—(AP)—The senate reconvened at noon today after a two months' summer recess, with but few members on hand for the opening session.

The tariff bill, passed in May by the house is the order of business for the senate, but as its finance committee has not completed its work a series of three-day recesses will be started to continue to September 1 when it is thought the measure will be ready.

After being in session three minutes the senate adjourned until Thursday. It was one of the shortest sessions in the history of the body.

Commission Has No Authority To Control Ice Plants

Chancery Court Holds Act of Legislature Unconstitutional.

IS PRIVATE BUSINESS

Commission Attorneys Give Notice of Appeal To Supreme Court.

JONESBORO, Aug. 19.—(P)—The statute enacted by the last legislature giving the State Railroad Commission regulatory powers over ice utilities was held unconstitutional by Chancellor Futrell today in a decision rendered in a decision rendered in Chancery court here.

In rendering his decision, Judge Futrell declared that "the state has no right nor authority to enact any law interfering with the operation of private business."

The opinion was given in the hearing of an injunction suit brought by the Railroad Commission to enjoin the Home Ice Company from operating, the company having continued operations after being refused a permit by the Commission.

Attorneys for the Commission announced that an appeal would be taken to the Supreme Court.

Defendant Killed As Case Called for Trial

FORREST CITY, Aug. 19.—(AP)—T. K. Trivett, of the Pine Tree neighborhood, was shot and killed in the corridor of the St. Francis county courthouse today as his trial on a statutory charge was about to start.

Clem Summers, father of the girl who was to be the principal witness against Trivett, did the shooting and was taken into custody by officers.

Sheffer Off To Springs for Course of Baths

A. S. Sheffer, manager of Montgomery Ward's local store, is in Hot Springs taking a course of baths.

Mr. Sheffer came to Hope in July, assuming charge of the store which was opened August 3. Shortly after his arrival he developed a full-fledged case of malaria which has made it impossible for him to continue his duties and he goes to the Springs to seek to regain his health.

Mr. Reinhart, of the Kansas City offices of the company has taken over management of the local place and will be located here.

Lands At Tokyo After Flight Over Two Continents

Japanese Marines House Silver Queen of Air Early Today.

WAS RECORD FLIGHT

Only Hop To Los Angeles and Lakehurst Now Ahead.

TAKO, August 19.—(P)—With a journey of 6380 miles across two continents officially logged, the dirigible Graf Zeppelin safely housed in a hangar at the naval air station here at 7:07, Japanese time, (5:07, Eastern standard time) today after a run of 102 hours and 53 minutes from Friedrichshafen.

Five hundred Japanese blue jackets brought down the silver Queen of the air at the field at 6:27, a. m., and 40 minutes later she was stowed away until her long flight of 5420 miles across the Pacific to Los Angeles is begun. That will be the next stage of the flight around the world. The trans-Pacific flight will begin Tuesday in the statement.

The staff of American, German and Japanese engineers at the field immediately began going over the dirigible, replenishing her stores and making everything ready for the oceanic hop.

Before landing the Graf Zeppelin made a courtesy flight over Tokyo and Yokohama to satisfy the curiosity of the people in the Japanese capital. The spectacle was something new in the Orient, even though Japanese modernization has been rapid since the middle of the last century.

Campaign To Make Fair the Best Ever

To Make Farm More Profitable Is Idea In Minds of Officials.

The one outstanding aim of the coming Southwest Arkansas Fair, Hope, September 23 to 28, is to emphasize the need of making this section more prosperous, Secretary W. Homer Pigg announced today.

An intensive campaign is being put on to interest a big rural attendance every day of the show. A visit to the exhibition will be like taking a course at an agricultural school, says the fair management. The study of exhibits will enable farmers to improve their livestock and crops in a host of ways.

The housewife will find the show fully as interesting as her husband. New receipts, new household conveniences, latest styles, premium-winning exhibits of cookery, and even the livestock, and farm products, will seek her attention on every side.

The livestock show is the backbone of the entire exposition. The big premiums for all kinds of purebred farm stock of leading breeds has attracted a large entry. Local interest in the show is breaking all records. An effort is being made to follow the judging from beginning to the end.

The entertainment program has been planned with great care by the committee in charge, and high class professional features never seen here before are promised. A record-breaking attendance is predicted.

Federal Farm Board To Aid Cotton Movement

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—(P)—The Federal Farm Board announced today that it had tentatively agreed to make certain financial advances to aid cotton cooperative associations in the movement of this year's crop.

Make the Barren Land Pay

A STORY appearing recently in many newspapers laments the fact that the last of the great white pine log drives in upper Michigan, once the nation's greatest lumbering state, is being made this year. More than a million logs will be sent down the Manistique river, and when the drive is finished it will mean the last of the big drives for Michigan.

Arkansas saw the last of its great log drives, comparatively speaking, several years ago. Within the last ten years more than a score of great sawmills have passed to their reward and where a few years ago stood vast acres of yellow pine now is but an endless stretch of cutover land, for the most part worthless unless set to growing timber again.

There are thousands of acres of land in Arkansas that can serve the owner best by growing timber. Much of the land of the state, including great tracts in Union county and other sections of South Arkansas is not adapted to farming. That land once held a treasure in the form of pine timber. It will grow timber again if given a chance. This fact is being amply demonstrated where second growth timber is furnishing logs for small mills. There are instances of the third cutting within a period of 25 years, notably in the western part of Union county. Along in 1908 the Werner Sawmill company cut the virgin timber from thousands of acres in the territory between El Dorado and the Columbia county line. A dozen years later that same land was cut over again by the Edgar Lumber company. Now a small mill perched not far from the El Dorado-Magnolia paved highway and is cutting the third crop of pine trees. Much of that land is owned by farmers and small landowners who have reaped three cash crops without the turn of a hand.

Although Arkansas has not regarded her timber heritage of sufficient value to plan a state forestry commission, Uncle Sam has at the request of Governor Parnell, offered to make a survey of the forest areas with a view to prevention of fires, one of the most urgent needs of the state in forestry work.

The day of the big sawmill has about passed, but hundreds of smaller ones and other pulp mills like the one at Camden will be using timber from the broad acres of this state for years to come. The farmers of Arkansas as well as the big landowners will profit by the growing of timber and by protecting the crop from forest fires.

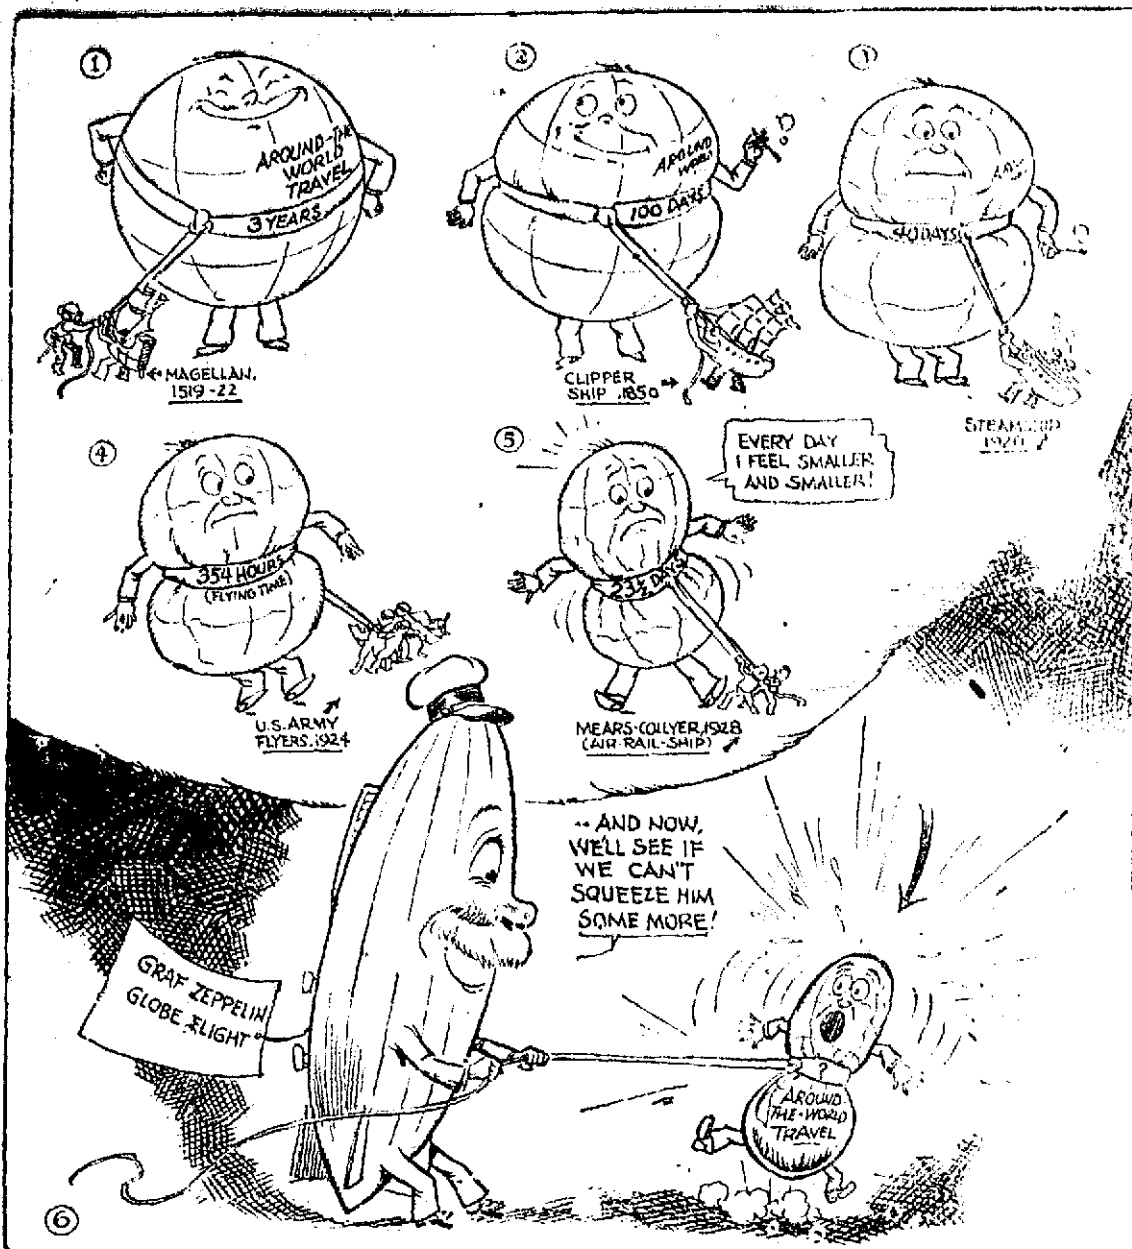

The Graf Zeppelin Adventure

The flight of the Graf Zeppelin around the world, which began at Lakehurst, N. J., August 7, is very likely to be accounted the greatest adventure in history. True, aviators of the United States Navy flew around the world as long ago as 1924. The two planes which made the entire circuit were gone 175 days, and their flying time approximately 350 hours was about 480 miles.

The Graf Zeppelin promises a far greater adventure. Indeed, if she does what her commander, Dr. Eckener, has planned for her, the flight around the world must in time with the classical tradition of Jason and the Golden Fleece. She flew from Lakehurst to Friedrichshafen, 4200 miles, in 55 hours and 24 minutes. She has now taken off from Friedrichshafen for Tokyo, Japan, a distance so great that she is expected to take more than five days to make it. In the course of that long journey she will cross such immense land areas as Russia, Siberia, Mongolia and China. The veritable cradle of the human race, those mystical plains from which Genghis Khan and his Tartar hordes rolled out to conquer much of the world, that hoariest of all the nations of history, China—all these will pass in review before the eyes of those who are making the trip with Dr. Eckener.

It goes without saying that all the world hopes to see the Graf Zeppelin succeed. Hers is an adventure in the finest traditions of human courage. "The little joker, man," as Carl Sandburg calls him, is at it again. His indomitable spirit goes from one conquest to another. In this instance it promises to outdo the adventure of Marco Polo.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The Reducing Champion

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON—It looks as if the next Senate investigation might be an inquiry as to whether any of the power interests have been trying to monkey with the Federal Power Commission.

This commission is composed of the Secretaries of War, Interior and Agriculture. Its directing head is an executive secretary, F. E. Bonner, succeeding O. C. Merrill just retired. It controls all power sites on navigable waters and on public lands and federal reservations, and has supervision over licensing, location, design, construction, maintenance and operation of power projects on these sites.

The commission is supposed to function in the interests of the people. In its annual reports, however, one finds such complaints as that owing to lack of money and personnel it has been unable to perform its duties "related primarily to the protection of the public interests." Attempts to enable the commission to carry out its protective functions as required by law were for awhile blocked in Congress, allegedly with the aid of members friendly to the power interests.

The Water Power Act provides for investigation, upon each application, of engineering features, best interests of the region, financial angles and other matters, but the sites have been handed out with little opportunity for such work as that owing to a small staff and low appropriations.

Lately, however, the accounting staff of the commission has been able to put on a burst of speed, trying to catch up with its protective work, and this activity appears to be worrying the power interests, who seem to have sought to head it off or nullify its effectiveness. Sites are licensed for 50 years, at the end of which time the government can recapture the plant or relicense it to a preferred applicant such as a municipality. The Act provides a system of public utility accounting and the government, upon recapture, is supposed to pay only the actual cost, minus the depreciation reserve. The higher the depreciation reserve the less the government will have to pay—and vice versa.

The commission accounts, under Chief Accountant William V. King, have been using the Interstate Commerce Commission's standards which consider depreciation as a definite operating expense, whereas electrical utilities involved consider depreciation allowance a matter of the board of directors to consider after making provision for bond interest and dividends. Other accepted standards used by King, with the commission's authority, have been equally annoying.

Recently work went around through the "grapevine route" that an attempt was being made to move King somewhere else. Whether this report was true or not, a remarkable document has found its way into print, tending to insure the safety of King's job, to reveal the attitude if not the activities of some of the power interests and to make likely a Senate investigation.

Divorce, Remarriage, Politics Mixed In Bishop-Rector Dispute

BRUNSWICK, Ga., Aug. 14.—The most famous kidnapping case in history—thit of little Charlie Ross—has been "solved" again. A faded confession, dated Sept. 3, 1879, and just found in an old trunk in a dusty attic, convinces Coly McHale, of Brunswick, that he was the little boy who was hide the child which he did in an old mine. When the search became too hot, they gave him money and told him to dress the boy in girl's clothes and flee south with him. Later, he heard that these two men had been killed in a burglary.

McHale says he had long suspected that the man was not really his father and now he believes this "confession" proves he was really the kidnaped Charlie Ross.

But the Ross family, which spent thousands on the search that continued for many years, is far from convinced.

JAZZ ORCHESTRA PLAYS IN PEPPY MUSICAL FILM

With the casting of Jess Stafford's jazz orchestra in "Close Harmony," a Paramount all-dialogue and singing production, Charles (Buddy) Rogers renewed acquaintance with three of the young musicians in the organization. Rogers plays the leading male role in "Close Harmony" which comes to the Saenger Theatre for two days starting today and the musicians who appear with him are Lucian Lukas, Clyde Lukas and Art Winters. They attended the University of Kansas with Rogers and played in the same college orchestra with him.

The film engagement did not interfere with the Stafford orchestra's engagement on the stage at the Loew State Theatre, Los Angeles, since the studio arranged the schedule so that the musicians were working before the cameras and microphones only until noon each day. Then they hurried to the theatre to perform at afternoon and evening engagements.

Nancy Carroll, the film Rosemary of "Abie's Irish Rose," plays the feminine lead in "Close Harmony" as the featured singing and dancing star of a "presentation" program at a big cinema palace. Jack Oakie and Richard 'Skoots' Gallagher are cast in important roles in the production, playing the parts of vodvil song and dance men.

There are four featured songs in the production, and it is one of the first Paramount audible films in which the sound engineers have eliminated hissing.

stolen 55 years ago from Germantown, Pa., a Philadelphia suburb. The mystery gripped the nation as $20,000 reward was offered, but no trace of the child was ever found.

Coly McHale is the newest of several claimants who have bobbed up in recent years, none of whom has ever been able to prove his case. But McHale is so certain that he is the long-lost Charlie Ross that he has adopted that name. The Ross family has not objected, but Walter Ross, a brother of Charlie and now a broker who recently paid a huge sum for a seat on the New York stock exchange, refuses to recognize the Georgia workman as his brother.

Kidnaped in 1874
Charlie Ross was kidnaped in 1874 by two peddlers, traveling about the country in a wagon, who offered him candy. Years ago two men suspected of the crime were shot as burglars in New York, but they died while apparently on the verge of a confession.

McHale says he remembers something of his childhood and that he was brought south in a wagon by a tinware peddler who posed as his father. The latter died some years ago.

The alleged confession, just found, is signed with the name of this man. It states that the actual kidnapers hired him to

Flappers Make Snappy Comeback

WICHITA, Kan., Aug. 17.—The counter-offensive was on Thursday in the movement of Myra McHenry to ban bare legs on the streets of Wichita. The flappers answered and—as is the case with most human conflict at its beginning—the answer came from a pen that dripped vitriol.

Myra's 83 years have carried her through a period as understudy to Carrie Nation, through the day of bustles, neck-bands and trailing skirts, the new youth, has only a back ground of modernity which has bequeathed it the knee-high dress, the hoseless summer fashion. But today as yesterday the pen is a vicious weapon and Myra knows well the method of ridicule and publicity which has been turned upon her by girls reared in an atmosphere of woman's emancipation and independence. Myra and Carrie Nation were using the inkwell and quill as a weapon before mother's of some of Myra's present opponents were born.

While the aged woman patrolled the streets from which she would drive by city ordinance women who wear no hose, the Wichita Eagle received a letter.

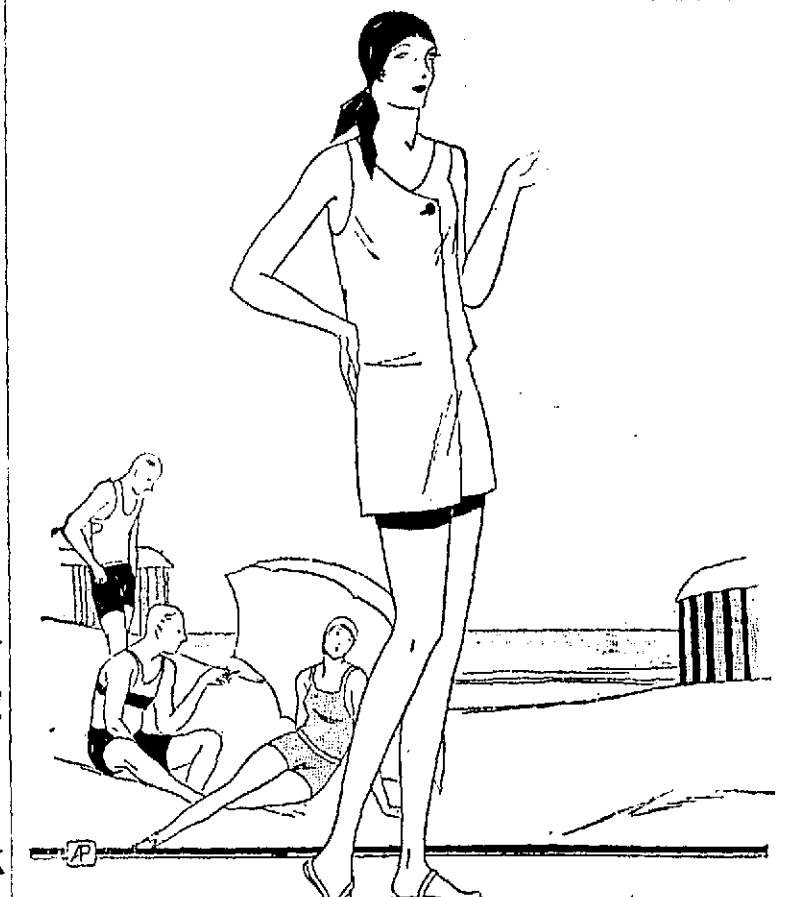

"Dear friends," the reformer's enemies begin. "We can't blame Mayor Lawrence for siding with the position of Myra McHenry against the stockingless fact. The mayor undoubtedly had a vision of Myra's spindle shanks uncovered and exposed to the world at large."

Friends, a howl to the mayor then a cruel thrust! Here is the wisdom of diplomacy and the unkind hurts of war in which, it is said,

Smith, Atheist Fined Last Year In Little Rock for Blasphemy, Is To Give Officials Another Shot

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Aug. 17.—(AP)—Willingness on the part of the local law enforcement authorities to permit Charles Smith of New York, president of the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism, to evade payment of a penalty assessed by the Little Rock Municipal Court against Smith last November for blasphemy does not meet with the approval of the atheist and he will make another attempt to force the officials to perform their duty.

When Smith was hauled into court charged with blasphemy, Judge Harper Harb found a verdict of guilty and fined the atheist $200 and sentenced him to 60 days on the Pulaski county farm. Smith promptly filed an appeal to circuit court and made bond for his appearance at any time that the appeal was set for hearing.

Following the appeal, Smith left for New York, but instructed his attorney, Walter M. Purvis of this city, to prosecute the appeal. Smith's aim was to fight the case through the state courts and into federal courts in an effort to set aside a clause in the state constitution which forbids atheist to hold office or to testify in any of the courts of Arkansas.

Back in Little Rock after waiting nine months on Prosecuting Attorney A. B. Cypert to set the appeal for trial in the Pulaski county circuit court, Smith anything is fair. But the pen writes on.

"We would open a counter-attack against the well known 'leader' by asking her where she got the bloom's youth which she wears on her cheeks, and why it is brighter on one side than on the other, and isn't she ashamed of her self?"

There is a phrase then which reveals the last withering of sympathy, complete abandonment to the sadism of the warrior. It reads, "but we wouldn't be rude to such a gentle old soul."

The letter was signed "Two girls of the we're Agin' 'em club." Does Myra McHenry sob over these steel-sharp lines? No, and this is the secret of the woman. She thrives on this slashing attack. It is fuel for her ideals and confirms her in belief that her crusade is right and its subjects need her guidance. Myra merely tucks up her grey hair and carries on. She is invulnerable.

High Finance

the common law with reference to blasphemy.

Authorities Satisfied Law enforcement authorities here appear to be satisfied to permit Smith to go without paying the penalty for blasphemy but the atheist sees in their leniency an effort to prevent him from testing the law and attaining the very purposes of his efforts.

Prosecutor Cypert, when asked if he is ready to prosecute the appeal in circuit court said: "I am ready to make no announcement regarding the matter. Nor am I ready to set the Smith appeal for trial. All Smith wants is publicity and I am not willing to help him get it."

On former occasions Cypert said that he was willing never to bring the case to trial. "If Smith will stay out of Arkansas, we shall be satisfied," the prosecutor said.

Divorce Evil Causes Big Row

LONDON, Aug. 17.—(AP)—Divorce, remarriage and politics scrambled themselves into a situation that called forth a statement from Dr. Winnington Ingram, the Bishop of London, to the effect that the remarriage of a divorced member of Parliament was performed in a church "without the knowledge or sanction of the Bishop."

Sir William Davidson, conservative, who was re-elected to the House of Commons from South Kensington in spite of an opposition conservative candidate, was divorced last October from a daughter of Sir Owen Roberts. The women of South Kensington, who outnumbered the men voters by nearly 27,000 waged a serious campaign to keep him out of Parliament.

He succeeded in winning the election with a margin of 20,000, one of the largest in the whole election, and a few weeks after his success at the polls married Miss Constance Marriott, the daughter of a major in the Dragoon Guards.

After the marriage in the registrar's office Sir William and his bride went to the church of St. Ethelburga, Bishopsgate, where Dr. W. F. Geikie-Cobb gave the blessing of the Church of England.

The church frowns upon the remarriage of the guilty party in a divorce action though the ceremony is approved in the eyes of the law.

The Bishop of London said that Dr. Geikie-Cobb did not consult him and performed the ceremony entirely upon his own responsibility.

"Dr. Geikie-Cobb, I have no doubt," said Bishop Ingram, "acted quite conscientiously within the limits of his view of the position but that view does not coincide with the general sentiment and feeling of the church or with my own. He was within his rights to give a blessing to Sir William Davidson's marriage, and no action can be taken about it."

"Sir William Davidson's divorce I know little about, but I understand that he was, in the eyes of the law, the guilty party, so that in he could not expect to be married in church."

ing of the church or with my own. He was within his rights to give a blessing to Sir William Davidson's marriage, and no action can be taken about it."

Club's "Daddy"

About 27 years ago, A. B. Graham started at Springfield, O., the first movement toward the National Boys' and Girls' Club. He began with 85 rural young folk whose interest in farming was lagging. At meetings Graham would extol the beauties of farm life and instruct the members in the art of correct farming. Today the club has an enrollment of more than 663,000, and Graham is recognized as the "daddy" of all the scattered units. He is now in charge of club work for the midwestern states of the Extension Service of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

The church cannot approve of any kind of church ceremony connected in any way with the remarriage of such divorced persons.

Dr. Geikie-Cobb also issued a public statement defending his action, saying that he was under the impression that "what the law sanctions does not require the further sanction of a bishop."

"My chief regret, however, is that the officials of the Church of England should show no sympathy with the demand for a higher conception of marriage, but should yield to the clamor of those who think that the current Catholic view is consistent with the Christian, whereas it is in fact a contradiction of it," said Dr. Geikie-Cobb in a letter addressed to the bishop.

The officiating minister when interviewed said that he "did not regret this happening. I knew it had to come sooner or later. Both parties can by law be married, and therefore the bishop is willing to put himself above the law. "The bishop asked me why I had the service in my church, and I said: 'Because Sir William Davidson was a member of my division and I had personally supported him and was glad to find him overwhelmingly returned.'"

Max Will Sleep Indoors Because of Slight Error

WHITEHALL, N. Y., Aug. 18.—Max Gordon enjoyed sleeping in a tent until recently. The reason for his change in attitude was a porcupine which he mistook for his pet poodle.

It happened thus: One night while dozing in his tent Max felt a small animal moving across his bed. Thinking it was the poodle, he aimed a vigorous kick at the intruder. He spent the rest of the night picking quills from his foot. Hereafter he will sleep indoors.

The SHINING TALENT

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Molly Burnham, with a couple of shows on Broadway, and more money than she knows what to do with, decides to ask Jack Wells to marry her. Molly and Jack have been sweethearts of sorts ever since college days. But Molly has made money, and acquired fame, while Jack sticks to the same old rut.

Following a rather hectic evening, during which Bob Newton and Red Flynn alternately make love to her, Molly decides to get married and settle down. Bob is a widower of her dearest friend, a girl who left her small daughter to Molly, as precious heritage. Red is a newspaper man, with an invalid mother on his hands. Molly knows she has no moral right to encourage either of them. But she happens to be one of those women who, all unconsciously lead men on.

At midnight, on an impulse, she calls a taxi and catches the late train for New York to see Jack—and ask him to marry her.

No Go On With the Story

CHAPTER XXXV

They met at a little restaurant. Molly was waiting when Jack reached there, reading a newspaper at the table in the corner. The censors, unable to pullock the theatre, had censored their activities. But Molly noticed that a woman's club in Flatbush had passed resolutions the day before, condemning "Sacrifice," as tending to "corrupt the morals of youth."

"Idiot!" she thought.

Mr. Durbin would be glad, though. The publicity, he declared had fallen off, and with it the sale of tickets. But they were playing to a full house each night. And the advance sale was nothing to worry about.

Neither were the royalties. Molly had bought herself a squirrel coat at the August sales, and paid $1,000 for it, marked from $1500. She spent her profits riotously, although Red tried constantly to curb her extravagances. It was glorious to have plenty of money—particularly for a girl who used to count herself lucky if she could keep a dollar bill in her purse.

Jack greeted her casually. It was not surprising that she should be in New York, since she had two shows playing there.

"It's great to see you," he declared warmly, holding her hand in both of his.

"You're looking adorable," he told her after he had ordered for them. "Take off your hat. I love to see your hair."

"You look pretty good yourself," she declared. "Busy, Jack?"

He smiled happily.

"Rushed as the devil," he exulted. "I guess I'm getting the breaks at last, Molly."

"Making money?" she prodded.

He smiled mysteriously.

"I'm on the track of a nice little fortune," he confided. "Nothing's clinched yet. But it's as good as settled."

"How's Mrs. Bulwer-Eaton?" she demanded.

"Well, Mrs. Bulwer-Eaton," he began.

"I know it," she interrupted. "She gave you your great big chance. Really. A heart of gold and all that sort of thing."

Jack missed the sarcasm.

"She's a wonder!" he pronounced solemnly. "I'd like to have you meet her, Molly. You'd like her a lot. And I'd certainly like to show you her summer place. I remodeled it last season. You'd be crazy about it. Maybe," he laughed rather mirthlessly. "Maybe you'll let me draw up plans for your place when you get around to building. All successful playwrights do have places, you know."

Their sausages arrived then, piping hot and savory. Molly decided not to propose until Jack's ravenous morning appetite was satisfied.

"I've something to ask you," she announced, when the last waffle had disappeared.

"Shoot!" he commanded. "I ought to be getting up to the office pretty soon."

"Now you've cramped my style!" she pouted. "It's very important. You mustn't hurry me. Besides, I'm embarrassed."

"You're blushing!" he accused.

"Maybe I am. I feel like bursting a blood vessel," she admitted.

"Listen, Jack. Look at me, dear."

"Will you marry me, Jack?"

Now, Right straight off."

Astonished, he stared at her. Crumpling a napkin slowly with his right hand.

"Molly?"

"Oh, it's all right." She laughed nervously, and felt her color mounting. "I mean I'm not acting like a girl in a play, or anything like that. I, I just want you to marry me."

"But why..." he began hesitantly.

"Because I love you, dumb-bell darling!" she cried. "My goodness, what did you think? I just love you—that's all."

His eyes held hers sternly.

"You're not joking, Molly?"

"Joeking!" she exclaimed. "I never felt so much like bawling in my life. I'm embarrassed to tears."

"But, Molly dear, why should you want to marry me?"

"There you go!" she cried. "Always looking for an argument! I told you why. I love you."

"But you have your career."

"I've had it," she contradicted.

"My dear, you'd never be satisfied without the plaudits of your public."

"Don't talk about my public!" she cried. "The word makes me sick. I tell you, Jack, I hate my public!"

"But adulation is the bread of life to you, honey. Excitement, crowds. Praise. Your name in the papers. Why, Molly darling, you eat it up! You couldn't get along without it."

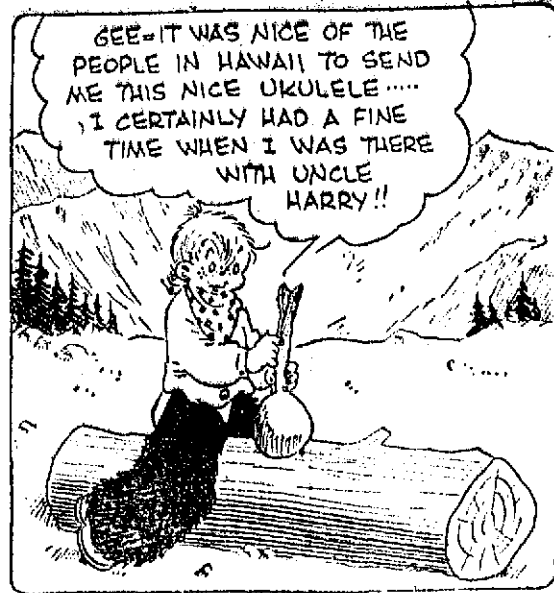

"Couldn't I? Try me and see," she invited.

"Dearest, you can't marry a poor man. A woman hasn't any respect for a man who can't take care of her."

"You told me that before," she reminded him. "I've had plenty of time to think it over. Besides, you said you were on the track of a nice little fortune."

"Yes—on the track. I didn't say I had it. I haven't been exactly a flop, Molly. I've made a little money. But, good lord, I couldn't support your menage."

FRECKLES AND HIS FRIENDS

"But I can," she pointed out.

"And what would your smart friends think of me?" he demanded.

"You'd pay the bills. And I'd be a Molly, I'd feel like a rat!"

She pushed the breakfast things away, and putting her elbows on the table, propped her chin in her hands.

"No more arguments!" she bullied playfully. "Will you marry me, darling? Or won't you?"

Her sparkling eyes anticipated his avowal. Now, surely, he would come, and kiss her on the lips. (That was why she had chosen the luthier, most secluded corner in the room.) He would put his arms around her. And tell her he loved her. And say she was the most wonderful girl in the world, because she had come to him so bravely, and asked him to marry her—quite as though she were not the most successful playwright on Broadway, and he a struggling architect.

"Will you, Jack?" she cried. "Or won't you?"

He looked at her steadily.

"I can't," he said. "I can't do it, Molly."

Searcely comprehending, she stared at him. And her eyes grew large with pain.

He continued quietly.

"It's out of the question, dear."

Pondering!

she would break down.

Jack's own voice was trembling. And he was white now. His face was very lean, with hollows in his cheeks. And there was a blue vein in his forehead that stuck out in frightening fashion. He looked suddenly old. And very unhappy. Molly had not noticed before how thin he was.

He looked at his watch absently. "All right," he said. "It's getting late. I suppose I'd better be getting along."

"Good luck," she said.

"You have all the luck," he told her.

"Yes," she agreed. "I have all the luck. Goodbye, Jack."

"Goodbye, Molly."

He stood there, looking at her. "Oh, go!" she cried. "For goodness sake, go!"

Her eyes were blinded with tears, but, before she could wink them away, he had gone. And there was only a patch of sunshine in the place where he had stood.

She looked across the table. His cigarette was still smouldering in his coffee saucer. A moment ago he had been sitting there. And talking. And breaking her heart. Breaking it into little bits of pieces, so that she could never put it together again.

And outside the day was soft and warm and beautiful. And the sun was shining. And everybody was happy.

Well, she would go back to Boston. She would move away from her beautiful apartment. She would bury herself somewhere in the country. She would devote her whole life to Rita. And never, never love anybody else so long as she should live.

She would be a hermit—that was what she'd be! She'd show Jack Wells how little she cared for adulation. Excitement. Crowds. Praise. That was what he said. He said she ate them up. She'd show him! And then, some day the time might come when he would want to men. She went to night clubs, and dances, and to the theatre.

Sometimes she thought of the anthology of tragic love she meant to compile. She read a great deal of verse, and copied the mournful fragments that pleased her.

Then she had another idea. She would gather the tragic tales of the world's great lovers—Isoide and Tristram—Dante and Beatrice—Pnola and Francesca—Antony and Cleopatra—Abelard and Heloise—why, they were all tragedies! And she would write of them tenderly and understandingly. For the exquisite delight and pain of all women who had loved and lost.

She went to the library, and came home with her arms full of books. And that evening, while she was reading them, Red came, unannounced, to call.

Will Restore Old Virginia Church

Virginians are raising a fund of $4000 to restore old Aquia church and its grounds at Stafford, built in 1757, to perfect condition. A new road is to be built from the main highway to the church, an arch is to be erected at entrance of the road, and the church building and graveyard are to be repaired. Above is a view of the old church; below, the interior, showing its famous three-tiered pulpit.

Accept these gifts with our compliments

Do you think of your newspaper merely as a means of finding out what the famous people in the world are doing, saying, thinking? As an impersonal record of events which do not concern you at all? We have something more than that to offer you. For instance:

Please accept today with our compliments these things, which you'll find in our pages: New and better ways of performing old house-hold tasks—means of saving steps, time, effort—labor-saving devices—short-cuts to efficiency—money-saving. 'Why,' you say, 'you're probably talking about the advertisements!' Just so—we are.

Think of the advertisements—and read them—as news. News of the world of goods and things—news of scientific achievements accomplished for your benefit—news that concerns you far more directly than an account of boundary disputes in Baluchistan can ever concern you.

Read the advertisements regularly, and use them as millions of other people are doing—to save you time, effort, money, trouble, when it comes to buying the things that make life a little easier—a little brighter. How Can They Miss?

With a lead of 10 games going into mid-August there doesn't seem to be any reason available to figure that the Philadelphia Athletics are not going to win the American League pennant.

It is true that about this time last year the Yankees slumped and blew a longer lead and just managed to stave off the last quarter rush of the same A's.

But the Athletics are a well balanced team and they do not depend upon two men as much as the Yankees depended on Babe Ruth and Herb Pennock last season.

'They're Not Quitting'

The Yanks have not resigned. They have been playing .600 ball and better all season and under ordinary conditions that should be good enough to keep off the pack.

They have been waiting for the A's to crack or for the slump that all baseball men believe any team must have a couple of times a year. But the A's are not cracking.

Pickin' on Poor Yanks

The Yanks say that every team in the league is down on them and that the seven other clubs are not particular who wins as long as the Yanks don't.

"They don't serve us any cousin," the Yank players say. "When they're playing us they shoot the whole pitching world at us and bear down with everything they got. When they go to work on the A's they haven't got the stuff they used on us."

Huggins Had a Hunch

The experience of the Yankees in the current race brings to mind a remark that was made by Miller Huggins, the smart manager of the club, in the training camp at St. Petersburg last spring.

There was some doubt of the physical condition of the Babe

Herb Pennock and Tony Lazzeri.

"I'm not giving that doubt a thought," Huggins said. "What concerns me is the mental attitude of the club. You can't eat pie all the time without getting tired of it. My fellows have been winning so long they may get the idea they can't lose. And that is a bad idea."

Watching the Scoreboard

There isn't anything to show, however, that the Yanks haven't hustled. They had some bad breaks early in the season and the Athletics got away to a flying start.

For a club that seems up against a hopeless proposition the Yanks have a surprising amount of spirit. The loss of the pennant will not only cost them plenty of prestige, but may amount to a cash loss of three or four thousand dollars each.

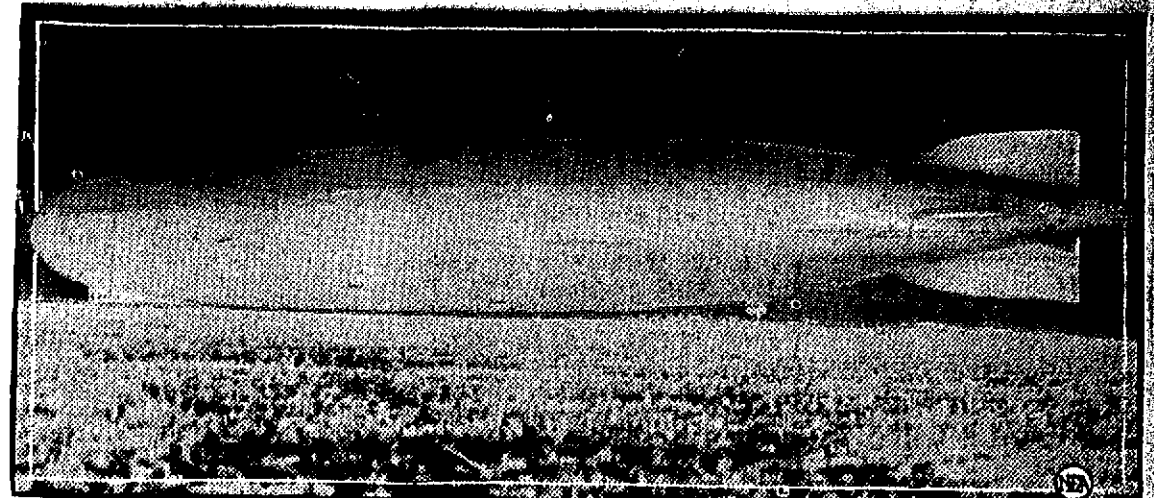

But on their recent western trip they had their heads up and were hustling and were watching the scoreboard to see when the A's would start slipping.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

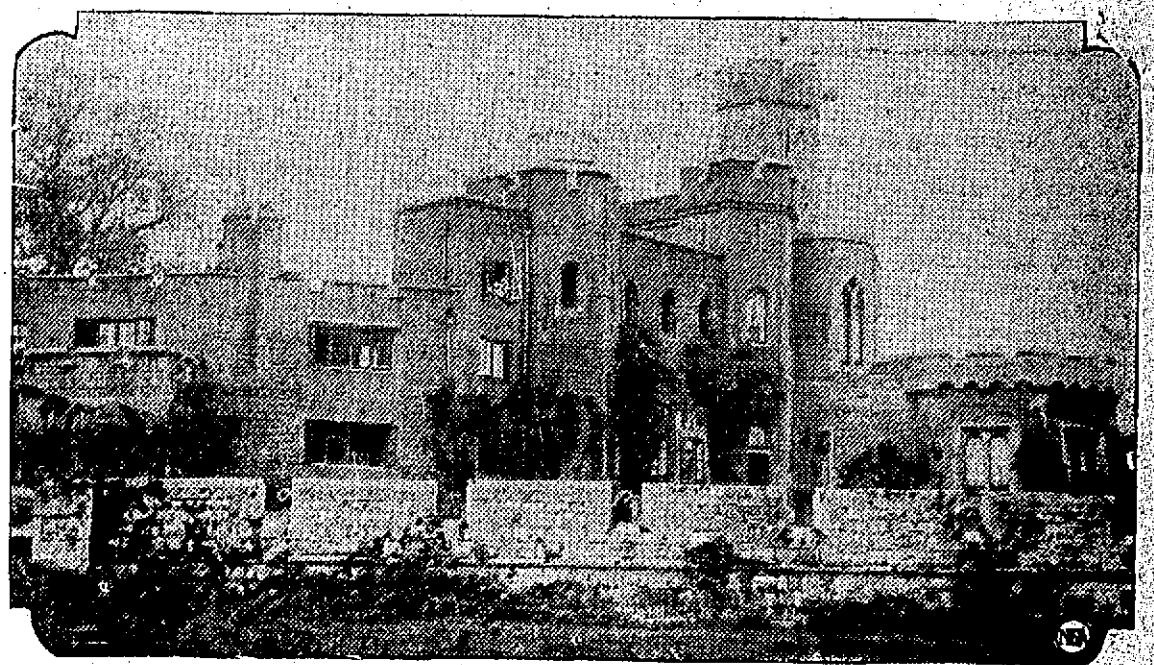

Art Shires smacked one in a recent game between the White Sox and the Yankees — He thought it was a home run — And he didn't stop when Lena Blackburne, the manager, tried to flag him at third — And he was out by a mile at the plate — And he said when he reached the bench: "That was one time Lena was right." — And one of the Chicago players remarked: "Yeh, even the great can be wrong once in a while." — The Cleveland Indians are one of the hardest hitting teams in the league — But they have been shut out more than any other team in the league — Twelve times up to early August — The Cubs are making so much money they have 10 men to manure the playing field before game time — And the Cubs asked that Papa Heydler make Dazzy Vance get a new sweat shirt — Because the sleeve on the right side is so ragged it flaps in the breeze and they can't see the ball.

"AUF WIEDERSEHEN!"

Historic Home Bought by Prince of Wales

Maybe it's to fortify himself against matrimony. Anyhow, the Prince of Wales has bought grim old Belvedere Fort, shown above with ancient cannon grinning from its stone walls, as his permanent country residence. The picturesque vine-covered castle, well known to tourists, lies between Sunningdale and Ascot, England, in a region famed for its outdoor sports.

Victorio Campolo may fight with the fury of a Fir po but outside of the ring he is different. Firpo didn't even have a manager. Campolo has a staff of four.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19. (AP) — A 25-year-old Italian-born boxer, Victorio Campolo, is being promoted to a "personal representative" by a "personal representative" have pitched camp in New York.

Their next move, which will be personally attended to by the promoter, will be an indirect thrust toward the heavyweight boxing championship of the world.

The promoter is Signor Victorio Campolo, who quit swinging a meat ax in his father's shop in South America to swing his fists in the jaws of the heavyweight challengers.

The mechanic is Gustavo Lencve, 36, who is Campolo's manager. Lencve, between hours in a Remois Aires machine shop, induced the world's biggest butcher to become the world's biggest fighter.

You find this pretentious publicity pack in a ritzy Ninety-seventh street apartment. And if you are patient you can get an audience with Signor Campolo.

It's something like invading the sanctum of the League of Nations this business of calling on the signor.

Campolo was born in Italy, but was reared in South America. Lencve, his manager, is a French Jew. The interpreter, of course, is from the Argentine country. His secretary likewise does his talking in Spanish. The English-speaking members of the group are the "personal representative" and the interpreter.

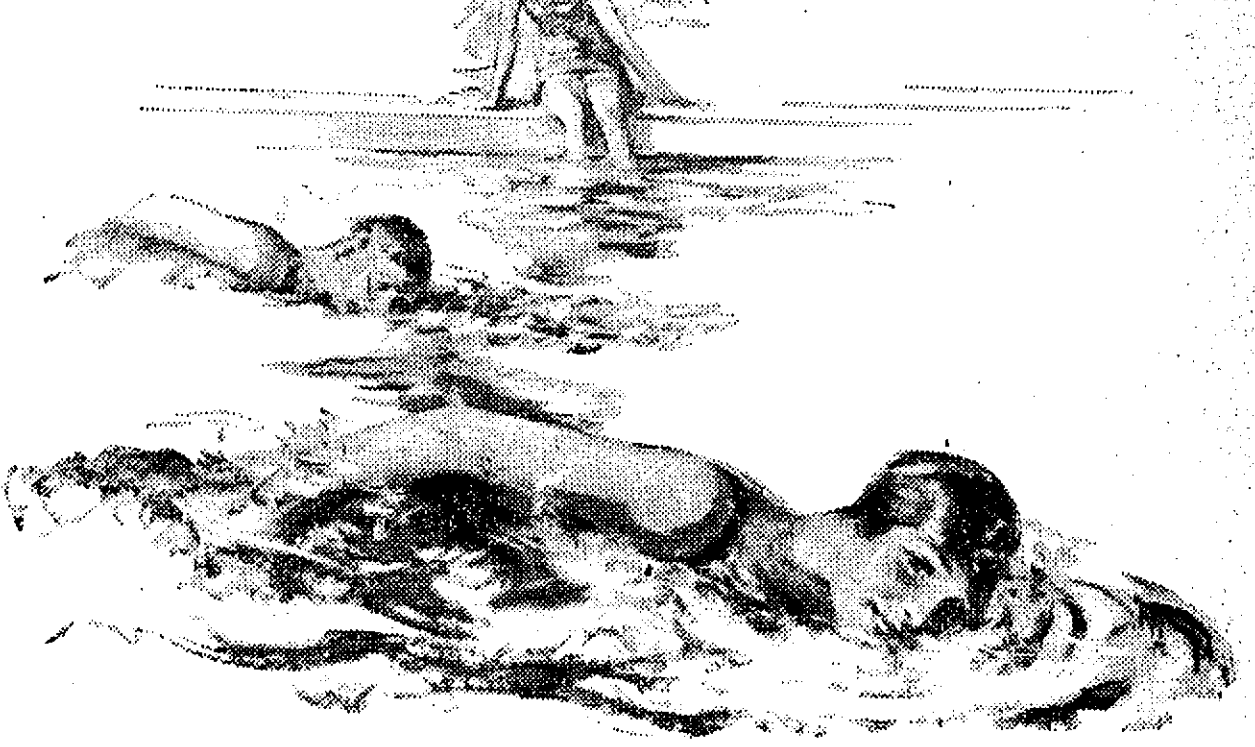

Spend 10 minutes in this uptown establishment and you learn that Campolo will win the title in 1930; that his second major ambition is to own the most expensive motor car in the United States; that he will bring his mother, father, six brothers and three sisters to America on a sight-seeing tour after he wins the crown, and that the signor's fondest hope is to get Max Baer into a regulation ring and pound out revenge for the beating a fellow South American, Paulino Jizquidun, took at the hands of Der Mac.

Campolo, the biggest heavyweight prize since the captive days of Firpo and Willard proved that he had something besides a reach eight inches greater than Jack Dempsey, when he stopped Tom Heeney in nine rounds.

What he will be able to do against first raters with his six-foot six-inch frame, weighing 230 pounds, is something the seasoned critics disagree about.

Some of them like the great butler cry of the little fellows—the bigger they are the harder they fall. Others recognize the signor as an outstanding challenger.

FAIR WORDS butter no parsnips... what smokers want in a cigarette is TASTE.

And taste is what Chesterfield offers. We have seen to it that the taste is there—mild, fragrant, satisfying flavor that talks more convincingly to smokers than all the fair words in the dictionary:

Bull Wins Argument In Crash With Auto

LONGMONT, Colo., Aug. 19.—When an automobile and a bull dispute the right-of-way at a crossroads, the bull wins. At least Mrs. W. E. Hillyer, prominent Longmont resident found it that way.

Driving along a country road, Mrs. Hillyer endeavored to scare a bull from the road by tooting the horn. The bull, however, disputed the car's right to molest him. The bull charged and the car was slow on the retreat.

One headlight, a fender and a bumper were the sufferers.

PERSONAL MENTION

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Barrow of Ozan, were visitors here yesterday.

Miss Thelma Cobb, stenographer to E. F. McFaddin, left Sunday for a two-weeks vacation in Hot Springs.

John R. Thomas, of Pittsburg, Kas., was a week-end guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. McClanahan here.

Misses Margaret and Lillian Powell, arrived Saturday for a visit with their sister, Mrs. Earl O'Neal and Mr. O'Neal.

A. W. McCarty and mother, Mrs. Elsie Dickinson, of Hot Springs, were in this city Sunday, guests of Mrs. J. A. McCarty.

Mrs. A. F. Hanegan, who underwent a serious operation Saturday night, is reporting as improving nicely, which will be a matter of pleasant news to this good lady's wide circle of friends here.

W. W. Duckett has about recovered from a short illness which he tried vainly to stretch out long enough to be called a vacation. Couldn't, however, so he'll be back at the same old job tomorrow.

BARBS

Maybe the bakers boy who stowed away on the Graf Zeppelin did it because he couldn't raise the dough.

Whippet races in Ohio are causing a heap of legal argument. Whoops! The law has gone to the dogs again.

Pullman porters, in mass meeting at Chicago, agreed that tipping was an insult. Well, most of us can spend the rest of our lives apologizing.

The 600 canaries that came over on the Graf Zeppelin are likely still singing its praises.

An American company plans to build dirigibles that will carry 80 people. That's 79 passengers and a stowaway.

Strange to say, not an egg was broken when 24 dozen were dropped from an airplane, via parachute down on a Los Angeles airport. Stranger, there wasn't a peep out of one of them.
